- A recently published study on city-wide seroprevalence to determine the extent of community transmission in Wuhan, China, found that 2.39% of more than 60,000 tests were likely infected with SARS-CoV-2, indicating a relatively low seroprevalence despite the major outbreak earlier this year.
- Australia's Melbourne has started to gradually ease the strict lockdown after ten weeks, removing the two-hour limit on leaving home for exercising outdoors and allowing residents to travel up to 25km from their homes, up from 5km. Retailers and restaurants remain closed other than take-away, with their reopening planned for November 1.
- Israel, one of the few countries so far with a second full lockdown, gradually started easing its measures yesterday.
